

Shock Collars Can't Be Justified

EXCUSE # 5

"It's just an animal. Of course, it's ok to use a shock collar to train a pet but not a child. You can't possibly equate the two."

Many can and many do equate the two. Both are precious to their families, at least for the lucky ones. Both are born with brains and nervous systems. Both bleed when cut and suffer when hurt. So why would anyone use a shock collar on a pet but never consider using one on a child? For some, it's the refusal to recognize animals as conscious beings. For others it's a mistaken belief in the expertise of a shock collar trainer. Mistaken because the industry is unregulated so anyone can call themselves a trainer. Quickie courses as short as six weeks leave graduates not with skills in canine behavior but with sales tactics. Training dogs isn't the goal; it's shock collar sales. So why do some use shock collars on animals...because we allow it.
