

Shock Collars Can't Be Justified

EXCUSE # 9

"IF IT WEREN'T FOR SHOCK COLLARS I WOULD HAVE TO GIVE UP MY DOG"

This statement is as cringeworthy as, "How else would I control my children if I didn't beat them?" Those who shock their pets are typically concerned with whom it serves and whom it benefits; themselves. A mistake riddled with consequences. When lifestyle or personal abilities are not conducive to pet ownership, without sinking to the use of electric shocks, good sense & compassion dictates you shouldn't have a pet. It's a labor of love to take on the care of another life. All too often, a pet's feelings are brushed aside by those who dismiss their sentience. Contrary to what many people believe, the capacity of a dog to understand their human often transcends their human's capacity to understand their dog. A dog should not be punished because of the inadequacies of the owner. Lets face it, some people just don't rise to the occasion, for their dogs or their children.
